Crèche Project -Giving children their deserved childhood

Children who are in prison with their parents constitute a very vulnerable group. Either born in prison or brought there at a very tender age, these children's familiar surroundings are cells. A child-oriented schedule on a daily basis is almost impossible and children suffer from this in many ways. Their talents are not encouraged nor are they taught proper values and morals. Age-appropriate toys are absent and the children are missing a friendly atmosphere. The Crèche Project provides alleviation from these surroundings.

In partnership with its sister concern NGO Navjyoti India Foundation, the project became a reality in 1994 and the prison now provides a nursery and pre-school for children under the age of six. Thanks to the Project, children can now enjoy their childhood and explore their aptitudes to the optimum.

Spread of the Project

- This project, a Dr. Bedi's initiative brought about a tremendous social reform momentum by the Supreme Court, that every prison must have a crèche for its children. We believe this investment is an important contribution to our society and our children's future
- Timely immunization and health checkups of the children are facilitated by us.
- The children attending the crèche have a developmental approach in learning new activities like normal children
- The parents have a positive attitude towards sending their children to the crèche as it provides a good, healthy and a safe environment for the advancement of their children.
- The child experiences a normal environment which would be similar as the outside world may offer.
- Children have a regular life and are ready to face the challenges.
- Talking to them makes one believe the necessity of such projects in every prison: the children learn to speak good and clean language;
Their behavior is cordial and they develop social manners.

The year's Highlights

Children of Vulnerable Families Project

IVF in action for children's future

Children above the age of five of Tihar prison inmates are the target group of the “Children of Vulnerable Families” (CVF) project. The general aim is to facilitate these children's social, physical and psychological rehabilitation by providing them education, including them in social and cultural activities in order to provide normal growing and healthy environment. The roots of the project lie within the crèche project. According to the Supreme Court guideline, children can stay with their parents in the prison till the age of six. Usually the children are then taken care of by potential relatives. In 1995, it was decided to extend the support to the children who reached the age of six and above through schooling. A new ray of hope to the confined parents to see their children secure.

Spread of the Project

- Parents are relieved from the thoughts of their children's safe and security.
- Quality education to more than 190 children.
- Strengthens the parent child bond by facilitating regular visitations.
- Sensitized groups of children and youth.
- Builds a foundation for a brighter future.

The Year's Highlights

- Registered 12 children from crèche to CVF
- 100 percentage results in board exams.

Weaving Behind Bars Project

India Vision Foundation started the Weaving Behind Bars project in order to give female inmates a chance to learn a respectable and decent skill. This project does not only ensure that prisoners learn a new task but also helps them regain dignity and mental concentration

Weaving Skills for the Betterment of Inmates

The first impression one gets of the project reflects a team effort, friendly atmosphere and high quality: the women have a big hall for weaving. The atmosphere is calm and the material used is of good quality. Currently, through the project, 25 permanent weavers are employed. Weaving allows them to spend their time creatively as their work is exhibited at various exhibitions. Prisoners can thus achieve partial financial independence; their earnings are deposited in their internal accounts at the Tihar prison and withdrawal is possible at any time. . The products produced range from tablemats, sceneries and carpets to designer tapestries and “prayer” mats. The women are free to use given designs or design their own weaving products. This helps in gaining higher self-esteem as their creativity is encouraged. The Weaving project has been running successfully since 1996. Consequently, it is possible to empower women and help earn a respectable living after their prison term is over.

Rebirth – A success story

The story began with the life of an ordinary woman who was married and led a happy family life with her husband and two children. The scenario changed when suddenly she was accused of murdering a young man. She went through rigorous imprisonment for over ten years and meanwhile she lost out on her family role, as a mother and a wife. After over a decade long battle for proving her innocence, she sees light at the end of the tunnel.

Looking at Madhumathi's family, we could see shades of anger, shame, anxiety and insecurity on their faces.

The IVF reached out not only to her but also her family and stood out like a beacon of light. Her family was in a desperate need of counseling which along with rehabilitation was provided immediately. The girl child was accommodated into a residential school and the boy wished to continue his study by staying at home. The foundation supported him by funding his schooling and vocational training program keeping in spirit the desire to "Save the next victim".

Madhumathi enthusiastically participated in all activities of India Vision Foundation while in prison and was a source of inspiration to all the inmates to accomplish their tasks in a timely and proper fashion.

Now, she is out of the prison and has joined the mainstream once again. She is struggling to re-establish her role in the society and pick up the strings of her family responsibilities. She is happy that her children are in the safe hands of IVF and on the right path of education and of building a bright future for themselves.

In her own words "I am grateful to the helping hand of IVF to save my children's future and giving me a rebirth in our society".

Now! Madhumathi has hope, relief and happiness.
