Chairperson, India Vision Foundation

Serving the cause of India Vision Foundation has given us all a meaningful life. While what we do is to transform lives, it has given each of us; project staff, donors, partners and volunteers a joyful cause to be associated with. We began with children in a play-way and now so many of them have reached college and universities. The march of time does not wait for anyone. I am happy to see the fruits of transformation right before my eyes.

Thank you all for helping us.

Next year we shall be 20 years old. Time flies!

Kiran Bedi

Celebrating Christmas inside the Tihar jail crèche

India Vision Foundation Crèche, Tihar Jail

Impact

In 2012 a total of 27 children of the female inmates at Tihar Jail were enrolled in the India Vision Foundation Crèche.

Identified through surveys conducted by IVF staff inside Tihar jail, three children (of incarcerated parents) though based out of their communities were smoothly transferred into the Children of Vulnerable Families project.

These children; Gaurav, Navi and Salman have been enrolled at our partner school - St John's School, Khera Khurd, children from outside but their parents are still inside the prison.

Research & Findings

The Centre for Early Childhood Education and Development (CECED), a part of Ambedkar University, Delhi (AUD) brings together research, policy and practice in a coherent and holistic frame to promote systemic understanding of development and early learning. CECED was keen on conducting a rapid study on exploring childhood in Tihar in partnership with India Vision Foundation, since IVF's presence has been seen as a positive influence in early development of children at Tihar Jail.

This study was conducted over four weeks during September and October 2012, CECED's findings were:

'The presence of INDIAN VISION FOUNDATION CRECHE is making a huge difference in the lives of these children as at least for some crucial hours children are in safe and trained hands. The teachers and the staff make efforts for the betterment of the children. Every month crèche staff and IVF staff celebrate birthdays of children. Every festival is being celebrated in the crèche. These efforts bring a normal environment in the life of these children and make them ready to face the outside world in some form. The most important merit of the IVF crèche and day care centre is the food quality supplied to the children. Food given to the children is nutritious as planned specifically by the nutrient specialist. The crèche staffs take an extra care of the weak child. After spending a few days with the children and the staff in the crèche it can be concluded with certain amount of certainty that the crèche is trying every possible and crucial effort to Save the next victim.'

Participation

The Centre for Early Childhood Education and Development (CECED) in collaboration with World Bank hosted a three day long South Asia Regional Conference on Early Childhood Care and Education (ECCE) - Towards Evidence Based Policies and Practices Before and Beyond 2015 between 29th-31st August 2012.

IVF was one of the 150 representatives, from South Asia including India, Bangladesh, Bhutan, Afghanistan, Nepal, Pakistan and Sri Lanka initiated and deliberated on various policy level discussions on ECCE. The attendees included policy makers, practitioners, civil society members and researchers from the South Asia Region. The experts, in agreement, identified ECCE as an indispensable foundation for lifelong learning and development, with a critical impact on success at the primary stage of education. IVF also participated in the poster competition during this conference, explaining our process of enrolling children at the Tihar Jail creche as well as their further transition into Children of Vulnerable Families Project.

G4S India for over a decade has been sharing the responsibility of supporting the IVF crèche at the Tihar prison. They have helped us in sustaining the project and enabling the vulnerable children to be good citizens of tomorrow. While G4S India primarily supports the crèche, since 2007 they have also extended their support to 10 female children between the age of 7 to 18 years, beneficiaries of our Children of Vulnerable Families project.

'Children of Vulnerable Families' Project

As a continuation of the care provided at the in-house IVF Crèche project, the Children of Vulnerable Families Project (CVF) was introduced in 1998.

The primary aim of this project is to facilitate the social, physical and psychological rehabilitation, i.e. access to education, equality and (re)inclusion of these children. Since children are permitted to stay inside prison with their mothers until they turn 6 years old, IVF identifies such children in need of support and formal schooling.

IVF has partnered with schools in the Delhi/NCR and our young beneficiaries are then placed in these schools' residential facilities. The children remain under the caring wing of IVF until they complete their higher education, post which career counseling/placement is also facilitated by IVF.

The following are highlights of the activities undertaken by the CVF team in 2012-13:

Activity	What we did?	What we achieved?
Community Action Plan (65 Beneficiaries, including children and families)	An initiative that encouraged the project's senior beneficiaries to get oriented into and eventually participate in a daily needs material collection drive, through the interaction with local shopkeepers.	The main motive behind this Community Action Plan was to enhance the communication skills of our children and their awareness of social issues. This was achieved. Further, 15 shopkeepers out of a total of 50 agreed to help.
Thoda Masti Thoda Magic - Summer Camp 2012 (100 Beneficiaries)	An initiative aimed at enabling children of vulnerable families to utilize their time during their summer vacations in a constructive manner by honing their potential talent.	The children learned a plethora of new skills in various fields like art, drama, charkha spinning etc.

Weaving Behind Bars

Project, Tihar Jail

The Weaving Behind Bars project is our vocational training programme for the female inmates at Tihar Jail. It aims to create skilled workers and skilled trainers. Assignments of work are given to these women where they use their skills in hand weaving, knitting and crochet to create products and in-turn earn a regular stipend from IVF.

Products created by female inmates under this project include hand woven products like coasters, tapestries, apparel etc, have been sold at various corporate and exhibition locations and the money raised is reinvested into the project. A total of 40 inmates were certified, trained and provided with a stipend for their efforts between 2012-13.

During the year, IVF set up stalls during occasions like Raksha Bandhan, Diwali and Christmas to display and enable the sale of these products at a number of corporate offices such as: Ernst & Young, G4S India, Cox & Kings, Mercer India and so on.

Tulsi's Story:

An Inspirational Transformation

Tulsi had served a term of 5 years, at Tihar Jail (Central Prisons, New Delhi) until she was released on bail in 2010. While she was imprisoned some of her barrack mates told her about India Vision Foundation.

One day she reluctantly walked into the Weaving Behind Bars (WBB) training center and an IVF staff member spotted Tulsi's vacant gaze. After speaking to her for a few minutes our WBB project manager found that Tulsi belonged to a village from the Indo-Nepal border and was a single mother of three children. One of her children Shrishti, two months at that time, was with Tulsi in the prison. As permitted by the Honorable Supreme Court, in Indian Prisons mothers are allowed to keep their children inside prison with them until they turn 6 years old.

Tulsi and Shrishti in 2013

Tulsi had never done any work apart from house-work prior to her imprisonment, though she was always known to be meticulous and hard working. Once Tulsi started to frequent the WBB center, our project manager was able to convince her to enroll for the certified training program run by IVF. She was also introduced to the prospect of earning a stipend, with which she could look after her daughter better. As soon as Tulsi began to spend more hours at the WBB center she started dropping off Shrishti at the IVF crèche. Soon, Tulsi was able to manage her time better and was also employed by IVF as one of the crèche cleaners, thus she made a little more money to support her child.

Days went by quickly and little Shrishti grew into an active and intelligent toddler. Even though some of Tulsi's family lived in Jahangirpuri (North Delhi), she was not very certain of their being able to support Shrishti once she would have to leave prison (when she turned six). One of her other two daughters was already being supported by the family in Delhi and the oldest daughter was with relatives at her maternal village in Nepal. IVF staff explained the CVF project to Tulsi and assured her that Shrishti would be in safe hands if she was placed in a residential school away from the jail environment by IVF.

Shrishti moved out of the prison when she was 4 ½ years and IVF enrolled her into a partner school called Infant Jesus in Sanjoepuram, Faridabad. Shrishti adjusted to hostel life quickly and performed very well in her studies. Every quarter IVF arranges mother-child visits between many like Tulsi and Shrishti, at the jail premises, to strengthen the bond between mother and child.

Tulsi with the help of government provided legal aid was able to attain bail and was released from prison in 2010. Since she carried the stigma of a woman with a history of imprisonment, she was certain her family would not whole-heartedly accept her back and she expressed her concerns to IVF staff. Considering Tulsi was illiterate the only suitable and 'safe' job for her was seen as her being a live-in domestic helper. Unfortunately, Tulsi was not treated with adequate dignity in the first house she was placed in and as soon as she reported this to IVF an alternative home was identified.

Today, it's been 2½ years since Tulsi lives with a warm middle class family in Delhi. She cleans and cooks for them and is fed the same food too. She sleeps in a separate room and is given the freedom to watch television and use the phone if she needs. Whenever Shrishti has holidays at school, she is dropped off at the home Tulsi works at and she too is warmly welcomed into the family.

Shrishti is now in the second grade and is assured the support of IVF until she completes her education. Tulsi has now even started to manage her money wisely and saves and still manages to send money to her relatives for their support towards her other two children and makes arrangements to meet them periodically too.

Had IVF not identified Tulsi's need in time, both she and her child may have struggled to re-establish their lives post prison release. We are happy to find that Tulsi and Shrishti are one such shining example of India Vision Foundation's efforts towards saving the next victim and mainstreaming the lives of those with a history of incarceration.

Gurgaon Prison, Haryana

In April 2012 IVF ventured into expansion. We extended our out-reach to the Gurgaon Prison in Haryana. IVF was the first NGO to approach the Gurgaon Prison management with well charted objectives and an annual project plan and with the cooperation of the jail Superintendent Mr Harinder Singh, we were able to begin operations.

Profile of the inmates:

The inmates at the Gurgaon prisons mostly belong to rural backgrounds and with a lower literacy rate. This prison setup promises us hope and immense scope for good work that can be introduced and sustained with the male, female inmates and their children. At the outset we aimed at bringing to this prison vocational training programs and other learning workshops that would ensure the vacant hours of the inmates were filled with activities that were of interest to them and those programs that posed opportunity for them to find employment or financial independence upon their release.

Other achievements:

Within 2012 itself, the females inmates at the Gurgaon prison completed multiple orders of jute products for some of IVF's corporate partners and some part of the earnings of the sales were re-invested into the project, while the other portion was used to pay the inmates a stipend.

Handmade greeting cards created by the male inmates were in popular demand and IVF received orders for the production of these during the festive season. The paintings made by some of the male inmates, enrolled in the IVF Art & Craft classes, were also exhibited at the G4S Coffee morning at the British Embassy in March 2013, this proved to truly encourage and boost the inmates' morale.

IVF is very proud of all the hard work rendered by the female inmates who made their brand of handmade chocolates very popular this year! IVF has received several orders for office events, kids birthday parties and even a large order for placement and sampling at the Gurgaon prison stall at the famous Surajkund Mela!

Highlights of 2012-13:

The Sonbhadra Centre: Naxal affected area, support and direct care by Superintendent Mr. Subhash Chandra Dubey and earlier by Mr. Pritinder Singh.

The JNU Centre: For the Special Protection Group, a centre especially for the staff who serve as commandos for political/higher authorities.

Gurgaon Prison - India Police Center: The positive relationship established between the jail authorities and IVF enabled us in collectively reaching out to a larger group of potential beneficiaries

- the children and families of the jail staff. On requesting the Gurgaon prison Superintendent Mr Harinder Singh, we were allotted an area where we were permitted to set up a computer training center, under the India Police Project, for the benefit of the prison staff and their families.

On 3rd January 2013 this center was inaugurated by Dr Kiran Bedi (Chairperson of IVF) and Mr Harinder Singh. A batch of 100 students were immediately enrolled for the two month long basic IT training program and a long term set-up at this site has been planned between the jail authorities and IVF.

Total number of beneficiaries (Students) year 2012-13:

3200 students were certified from all our centers

Percentage of Students:

40 % Boys, 30% Girls and 30 % Serving cops

Award/scholarship:

24 Students awarded with laptops

Currently IVF has placed previously donated laptops at this center. With the long standing support of Vedanta Foundation we are in the process of installing more machines for this center as the demand and strength of students is increasing from neighboring police colonies. This project is successfully running and all efforts are being made to ensure its permanence.

IVF goes Global

With the advent of year 2012, IVF added wings and took a flight to overseas in its mission of Transforming Lives!

In recognition of IVF's unique mission, Dr. Kiran Bedi was invited for a UN Women Event in Singapore. She used this forum to create awareness about our foundation and its activities.

This event led to IVF establishing first of its international partnerships and raise sponsorship for its project.

Later in 2012, Dr. Bedi was invited by the Council of Indian Australians in Sydney, Australia for a charity event where again sponsorship for ten children was raised. The Council has also invited Dr. Bedi to be a part of their 2013 event!

IVF G30 group was formed when IVF went to New York, USA in March 2013. This further led to the widening of our network and soon after, in July 2013, an event was also in the UK for IVF. In August 2013, The Great Khali join us as IVF's brand ambassador, followed by a successful launch of New Mexico chapter of IVF.

Both the events were successful as our mission, vision and objectives touched the hearts of everyone present there and many pledged their support to IVF's projects immediately.

Our overseas partners have not only promised but have lived up to their commitment of connecting more supporters to our cause in the future.

IVF is grateful to each individual donor and supporter who are our ambassadors and who continue to be our strength, encouraging us to work harder to save more vulnerable lives.
